WORKS IN PROGRESS

BOOKS

Insurgent Legal Discourses in the Spanish Atlantic. Early Constitutionalism New Granada and Cadiz, 1811-1821. A legal and cultural history of constitutional discourses involving both New Granada's early constitutionalism and the Constitution of Cádiz. Have drafted two-thirds of the text. Shall be able to finish it within one academic year upon completing additional field work (for a month) in Colombian archives.

The Merchant, his Wife and the Count. Law, Romance, Betrayal, Poisoning, and Daily Life in Eighteenth-Century Mexico. A case study concerning the life of a family in Zacatecas, Mexico, during the 1720s. Except for some notarial and ecclesiastical information I will be gathering in Fall 2015, research for the entire book has been completed. I will be writing the book's first draft during the 2017-2018 academic year.

Gender, Ethnicity and the Death penalty in early 19th Century Cuba. A micro-history of law and domestic violence in Camaguey, Cuba, with intriguing connections to the end of the death penalty by hanging for women. I have already gathered abundant evidence in Seville's AGI. Must still conduct field work in Camaguey, Cuba, during Summer, 2017.

The Long Global History of Domestic Violence and the Law. A synthesis of historiographical knowledge on battering and spousal murder from Greco-Roman Antiquity until the present. Book design in progress. Preliminary bibliographical research has been completed. Intend to present a book proposal to Cambridge University Press in Fall, 2017. Completion of the manuscript expected by Fall, 2019.
